Safeguarding standards met

The safeguarding standards are met. This means that leaders and/or those responsible for governance and oversight fulfil their specific responsibilities and have established an open culture in which safeguarding is everyone's responsibility and concerns are actively identified, acted upon and managed. As a result, pupils are made safer and feel safe.

How we evaluate safeguarding

When we inspect schools for safeguarding, they can have the following outcomes:

- Met: The school has an open and positive culture of safeguarding. All legal requirements are met.
- Not met: The school has not created an open and positive culture of safeguarding. Not all legal requirements are met.

Expected standard

Achievement

Expected standard

Pupils are generally prepared well for the next stage of their education. They attain above national figures in many subjects because they develop secure knowledge and skills across the curriculum. Reading is a particular strength, and many pupils become confident and fluent readers. In mathematics, many pupils reach the higher standards expected for their age. Across the wider curriculum, pupils gain the knowledge and skills they need to access new learning successfully. They recall prior learning with confidence and use subject-specific vocabulary accurately. This supports them to make meaningful connections between different subjects.

Most pupils, including pupils with special educational needs and/or disabilities, make suitable progress from their starting points. Leaders are strengthening handwriting so that pupils apply skills consistently across their learning and are fully prepared for future learning. Although most pupils achieve well, some do not build securely on prior learning because staff do not always identify and address misconceptions quickly enough.

Attendance and behaviour

Expected standard

Leaders have established a culture that promotes the importance of attending school every day. Most pupils attend school regularly and attendance is positive overall. Leaders identify concerns quickly and work closely with families to understand barriers to attendance. They provide support that reflects pupils' individual circumstances. This helps many pupils, including disadvantaged pupils and those with special educational needs and/or disabilities, to attend more regularly. Persistent absence is low overall and has reduced for key groups. Leaders' work is helping more pupils benefit fully from school life and learning. However, a small group of disadvantaged pupils continue to attend less regularly than their peers, and this difference remains an important focus of leaders' work.

Pupils behave well and contribute to the calm, welcoming atmosphere across the school. They are polite, respectful and proud to be part of the school community. Positive relationships between pupils and staff help pupils to feel safe and secure. In lessons, pupils usually settle quickly, engage well with learning and respond positively to teachers' expectations. Breaktimes are harmonious and inclusive, with pupils showing kindness and consideration towards one another. Leaders ensure that pupils who need additional support receive appropriate help to participate successfully in school life.

Curriculum and teaching

Expected standard

Leaders have a clear understanding of the quality of the curriculum and teaching. They have established a broad and well-sequenced curriculum that identifies the important knowledge and skills that pupils need to learn over time. Leaders have introduced a consistent approach to teaching across the school. They place a strong emphasis on securing the foundational skills that pupils need for future learning. Reading is a clear priority and pupils who need additional support receive effective help to develop fluency and access learning successfully across the curriculum. Leaders are also strengthening pupils' number fluency so that they can apply mathematical knowledge with increasing confidence. Leaders ensure that pupils with special educational needs and/or disabilities (SEND), including those in the communication base, can learn alongside their peers and access the full curriculum.

Teachers demonstrate secure subject knowledge and typically deliver the curriculum as leaders intend. Teachers explain new learning clearly, use modelling effectively and help pupils build on what they already know. Additional adults provide effective support for pupils who need extra help. Pupils enjoy their learning and contribute confidently to discussions. Teachers generally use assessment well to check understanding and address misconceptions. However, opportunities to identify gaps in pupils' knowledge precisely are occasionally missed. As a result, some pupils move on to new learning before they have fully secured important knowledge and concepts.

Inclusion

Expected standard

Leaders have established an inclusive culture where pupils feel valued and supported. Staff know pupils well and understand their individual needs. They adapt learning effectively to help pupils access the curriculum successfully. Pupils with special educational needs and/or disabilities (SEND) benefit from effective support in lessons and from additional provision that helps to reduce barriers to learning and wellbeing. The communication base is a particular strength. It enables pupils with hearing impairments to receive specialist support while remaining fully included in school life.

Leaders provide effective pastoral support for pupils who may need additional help with their wellbeing. Consistent routines and approaches help pupils recognise and manage their emotions successfully. Staff work closely with external specialists to ensure that pupils receive appropriate support when needed. Well-planned transition arrangements help vulnerable pupils settle confidently into new classes and stages of education. Parents are engaged positively and signposted to support when needed.

Leaders take appropriate action to support disadvantaged pupils and reduce barriers to learning. They have identified the key challenges that these pupils face and have developed targeted support in response. For example, their work to improve attendance is helping disadvantaged pupils attend school more regularly. As a result, these pupils are better placed to benefit from the opportunities that the school provides.

Leadership and governance

Expected standard

Leaders have a clear and accurate understanding of the school's strengths and areas for development. They identify appropriate priorities and take effective action to improve provision. Leaders have strengthened early reading and developed the wider curriculum, improving pupils' experiences and the quality of education they receive. They align professional development closely with these priorities, enabling staff to develop their expertise and contribute to a stable and collaborative culture. Staff feel valued, supported and able to improve their practice. Leaders also take appropriate action to support staff workload and wellbeing.

Leaders engage effectively with parents and carers and maintain positive relationships with the wider school community. Parents and carers recognise leaders' commitment to meeting pupils' needs and are positive about this aspect of the school's work. Leaders work closely with families to provide practical support when needed. For example, the school's community shed offers access to items such as school uniform and other essential resources.

Trustees support the school's improvement effectively. They share leaders' ambition for pupils and are committed to the school's inclusive values. Trustees understand what the school does well and where it needs to improve. They regularly review the school's work and check that leaders' actions are making a positive difference. Through the trust's circle model for collecting stakeholder feedback, trustees hear directly from pupils, parents, staff and other members of the school community. This helps them understand different views and make informed decisions about future development. While leaders have improved important aspects of the school's work, some developments are not yet fully embedded across the school.

Personal development and wellbeing

Expected standard

Leaders have established a clear vision for pupils' personal development and wellbeing. Through the curriculum, pupils learn how to stay safe, healthy and respectful of others. They develop an age-appropriate understanding of healthy relationships and learn about concepts such as trust, honesty and consent. Pupils know how to seek help if they have concerns and understand how to keep themselves safe, including online. Leaders regularly review and adapt this aspect of the curriculum to ensure that it remains relevant to pupils' lives.

The school's values are woven through daily school life and help pupils develop positive attitudes towards themselves and others. Pupils recognise the importance of treating people with kindness, fairness and respect. They speak positively about the school's inclusive culture and describe noticeable improvements in the way pupils respect and support one another. As a result, pupils feel that they belong and are valued as part of the school community.

Pupils benefit from a wide range of opportunities beyond the classroom. They take on leadership responsibilities, including through the school council, planet heroes and other pupil leadership roles. Through these opportunities, pupils learn how their actions can make a difference to their school and the wider world. Visits, visitors and community activities broaden pupils' experiences and help them develop confidence, responsibility and teamwork. Leaders work effectively to ensure that disadvantaged pupils and pupils with special educational needs and/or disabilities can participate fully in these opportunities.

Pupils learn about different faiths and cultures, and fundamental British values. They have a secure understanding of the range of ways that people can be different. Alongside this understanding, they develop the attitudes that they need to understand and appreciate difference. Pupils know that everyone is unique. They wholeheartedly believe that being different would not be a barrier to being accepted at Emmbrook Junior School.

What it's like to be a pupil at this school

Pupils are proud to belong to this welcoming and inclusive school. The school's values of respect, resilience and responsibility shape daily life and are reflected in the positive relationships between pupils and staff. Pupils greet adults warmly, show consideration for one another and value being part of a school where everyone is included. Pupils, including those with special educational needs and/or disabilities, benefit from thoughtful support that helps them participate fully in school life. Those who access the communication base are integrated fully into all aspects of school life. Pupils feel safe and know that adults will listen and help if they have worries. Bullying is rare and pupils trust staff to deal with concerns quickly and effectively.

Most pupils attend regularly and enjoy coming to school. They approach their learning positively and speak confidently about the experiences and opportunities available to them. Pupils develop secure knowledge and skills across a broad range of subjects and talk with confidence about what they have learned. Reading is an important part of school life and helps pupils become enthusiastic and capable readers. Most pupils, including disadvantaged pupils, achieve well from their starting points and are prepared suitably for the next stage of their education. Effective support helps pupils access learning successfully and overcome barriers to achievement.

Pupils behave well and contribute to the calm and purposeful atmosphere around the school. They settle quickly to learning, follow routines sensibly and respond positively to adults' expectations. At social times, pupils play together happily and enjoy positive friendships across year groups. Pupils also take on leadership responsibilities through roles such as the school council and planet heroes. These opportunities help them develop confidence, contribute to school life and learn more about the world around them.

Next steps

- Leaders should ensure that teachers effectively check pupils' understanding across the curriculum and address misconceptions so that all pupils secure key knowledge before moving on to new learning.
 - Leaders should continue to take effective action to ensure that pupils develop secure foundational knowledge and skills, particularly in handwriting, so that they are fully prepared for the next stage of their education.
